Wildlife trade and protected areas

TRAFFIC supports the development of protected areas as part of its approach to working for a world in which trade in wild plants and animals is managed at sustainable levels, and in turn supports ecosystem integrity

TRAFFIC Publications

Wildlife trade and protected areas

Reports available as PDFs can be downloaded free of charge

TRAFFIC's vision is of a world in which trade in wild animals and plants will be managed at sustainable levels, without damaging the integrity of ecosystems; in such manner that it makes a significant contribution to human needs, supports local and national economies and helps motivate commitments to the conservation of wild species and their habitats.

Illegal Wild Meat Trade Affecting Wildlife Based Land Use in the South East Lowveld of Zimbabwe: Drivers, Impacts and Potential Solutions

P. Lindsey, S. Romanach, C. Tambling, K. Chartier, S. Matema, I. Mupamhadzi, C. Matema and J. Muvengwi
 August 2009. 96pp.
 ISBN 978 0 7974 3922 1
 Published by: the PARSEL Project, prepared under the auspices of TRAFFIC East/Southern Africa.

This report is based on a study implemented to assess the ecological and financial impacts of illegal wild meat hunting in the Save Valley Conservancy and throughout the South East Lowveld, and to develop solutions with which to address the problem.

The Potential Production of Wild Meat from the Save Valley Conservancy, Zimbabwe

P. Lindsey and C. Tambling
 August 2009. 17pp.
 ISBN 978 0 7974 3925 2
 Published by: the PARSEL Project, prepared under the auspices of TRAFFIC East/Southern Africa.

This report stems from projects aiming to marry conservation and rural development in Zimbabwe, specifically to increase access to animal protein for rural human communities in the Save wildlife reserve, while encouraging appreciation and conservation of wildlife resources.

Observations and Informal Findings on Wild Meat Trade: Socio-economic Research with Local Communities in and around the Save Valley Conservancy, Zimbabwe

I. Mupamhadzi, C. Matema and J. Muvengwi
August 2009. 25pp.

ISBN 978 0 7974 3923 8

Published by: the PARSEL Project, prepared under the auspices of TRAFFIC East/Southern Africa.

This report presents a general overview of a socio-economic survey carried out in and around the Save Valley Conservancy (SVC) in Zimbabwe, probably the largest private wildlife reserve in the world, from mid-August to late-October 2008. It focuses on the question of why communities should bother to conserve wildlife and whether effective management of wild meat species would address livelihoods challenges in and around the reserve.

November 2008. 56pp.

Published by: TRAFFIC Southeast Asia.

The Malayan Box Turtle is a subspecies of the widespread Southeast Asian Box Turtle, which is considered the commonest freshwater turtle in South-East Asia, but despite this, and even its tolerance of manmade artificial habitats, the species is in peril due to over-exploitation. The role of protected areas in the conservation of this species is discussed.

Trading Nature: the Contribution of Wildlife Trade Management to Sustainable Livelihoods and the Millennium Development Goals

This comprehensive review of exploitation, trade and management of marine turtles in the Wider Caribbean Region highlights findings related to the legal framework for marine turtle management, patterns of domestic exploitation and use and international trade, and a variety of core management issues, including population monitoring, fishery controls and law enforcement. It calls for greater awareness of marine turtle habitats in coastal zone planning, as areas critical for the species often fall outside the boundaries of parks, reserves or other actively managed zones.

An Assessment of Trade in Gibbons and Orang-utans in Sumatra, Indonesia

(700 KB)
http://www.traffic.org/species-reports/traffic_species_mammals47.pdf
 Vincent Nijman
 April 2009. 45pp.
 Published by TRAFFIC Southeast Asia

This report presents an assessment of the trade in gibbons and orang-utans in Sumatra. Commercial timber extraction, small-scale logging (legal and illegal), conversion of forest to palm oil or wood-pulp plantations, and forest fires—along with the concurrent increase in access to formerly remote areas—are increasingly threatening the integrity of the remaining forests

Surveys of trade in Snow Leopards were conducted in Mongolia and Pakistan, and information was collected by consultants in India and the Russian Federation during 2002. The results clearly show that Snow Leopards and their parts are traded in all range States, with the possible exception of Bhutan. In the large majority of cases, this trade is illegal. Several Snow Leopard populations exist in protected areas, which form part of conservation plans for the species.

Reconciling development and conservation imperatives is particularly prominent in refugee situations in north-western Tanzania, where the needs of vulnerable livelihoods and diminishing wildlife populations need to be addressed together. Some surveys indicated that wildlife declined by 60–90% from 1990–1998 in protected areas neighbouring refugee camps in this area.
